FAMILY VIOLENCE ROLLING ACTION PLAN 2017-2020 SUMMARY
Overview
The Family Violence Rolling Action Plan is the next step in the Victorian Government’s ten year agenda to put an end to family violence.

It is focused on the first phase of implementation, including what we are doing and how they will be funded, as well as how they deliver on Royal Commission into Family Violence recommendations.

The Plan also outlines the Government’s unprecedented investment of $1.91 billion, along with other investments in housing, Victoria Police and Maternal and Child Health Services.

These are unparalleled reforms that will change the way services are delivered and better respond to the needs of victim survivors. Our timelines and approach reflect the scale of these reforms.

This Plan is the result of genuine and meaningful partnerships with victim survivors, the service sector and the community. We will continue to work with them in implementing these reforms.

Together we will make changes required to keep victims safe, to hold perpetrators to account, and to prevent family violence in the first place. Together, we will save lives.

Background
The impact of family violence is significant and far-reaching. It touches families and communities across our state.

In March 2016, the Royal Commission into Family Violence made 227 recommendations for change.

The Victorian Government committed to implementing every one of these recommendations, and in April 2016 provided $72 million to begin work on the most urgent recommendations.

Guiding our approach to delivering these unprecedented reforms are:

- Ending Family Violence: Victoria’s Plan for Change (the 10 Year Plan) – launched in November 2016 and outlines our 10 year strategy for implementing Royal Commission recommendations.
- Free from Violence: The Primary Prevention Strategy – launched May 2017
- Roadmap for Reform: strong families, safe children – launched April 2016

Additionally, the Victorian Government has partnered with communities and the sector, as well creating Australia’s first Victims Survivors’ Advisory Council, to hear directly about victims’ experiences of family violence and advice on how to affect meaningful change.

KEY REFORMS
Meeting demand on the frontline

The impact of family violence is significant and at the same time as we deliver on the reforms recommended by the Royal Commission into Family Violence, we are also continuing to invest in the services that victims need now. This builds on our initial $572 million urgent family violence investment in the 2016/17 Victorian Budget and includes:

... $270.8 million to specialist family violence services for case management and counselling for women and children, continued financial counselling programs, additional flexible support packages, and improved support for people from diverse communities.

... $81.1 million to strengthen Maternal and Child Health Services including additional visits for at risk families and workforce training.

... $71.1 million to employ 450 additional Child Protection Practitioners and $59.6 million to support children and young people who are unable to live safely at home by expanding Targeted Care Packages.

... $50 million to expand headleasing and build new public housing properties, aligning with more than $2.7 billion in investment announced since the Royal Commission, to address homelessness and deliver thousands of new social housing homes.

... $49.9 million for Victoria Legal Aid and community legal centres to help victim survivors with family violence intervention orders and child protection matters.

... $29.2 million for family services to assist an additional 1,229 families, particularly those requiring intensive support. To align with the rollout of Support and Safety Hubs a new model of family services will be developed together with the community sector throughout 2017.

Responding to family violence in Victoria’s diverse communities

We are responding to the diverse nature of family violence, strengthening support for every victim:

... $33.5 million to ensure Aboriginal communities and services are adequately resourced.

... $9 million to build the capacity to deliver family violence services for culturally diverse communities.

... $5.3 million for the rollout of the HOW2PROGRAM (Rainbow Tick) accreditation program for all funded family violence service providers. This funding will also provide for LGBTI specialist family violence services that deliver referral, counselling, peer support and perpetrator programs and specialist training for frontline family violence workers.

... Women with disability will be further supported through the expansion of the Gender and Disability Program and upgrades to refuges to allow for disability accessible, independent living while also connecting people to services and support.

Ensuring we deliver on our vision

As we progress these reforms, we also need to be measuring their effectiveness.

This includes improving how we collect and use data with the establishment of the Victorian Family Violence Data Framework.

It also involves changes to the way we design, fund and measure the effectiveness of services. We will develop new demand modelling tools, data systems to track outcomes, and a central point to share evidence on what works.

Holding us to account will be the Family Violence Reform Monitor, Tim Cartwright APM. The Family Violence Reform Implementation Monitor Act was passed in December 2016, and each year the Monitor will report to Parliament on our work.
